PROJECTS

Pokédex

Designed and created an interactive Pokémon web application that utilized the PokéAPI. Developed with HTML, CSS, JavaScript, jQuery, Bootstrap, and Ajax. User experience includes: ability to search through the original 150 Pokémon by name, click on their cards which triggers a pop-up for more information, and add their Pokémon to a favorites list with local storage implementation.

One Stop Shop

A marketplace web application developed with Node.js. Users can create an account, add and remove cart items, upload and delete products, maintain data for products they have added, checkout their cart, place orders, and view past orders. The SendGrid API is used to send emails and payments are handled using the Stripe API. Image files are hosted in an AWS S3 bucket. Project also includes EJS, CSS, JavaScript, NPM, Express.js, MongoDB, Mongoose, PDFKit, and Multer.

What's Up, SA

A full-stack web application that is focused on striving to connect communities in San Antonio, Texas by compiling public city based events and functions. Users are able to submit events, add friends, and show interest in other events. In addition, users can upload images to their profile and events and their interests will be shared with their friends list. Developed with HTML, CSS, JavaScript, Java, Spring Boot, Thymeleaf, MySQL, and Filestack to deliver outstanding functionality across devices and platforms.

Ad Lister Application

A full-stack Craigslist clone developed with HTML, CSS, Bootstrap, Java, and MySQL. Allows users to create accounts, sign in, create and edit ads, and select categories for their ads. Utilizes the MVC pattern, JSPs, and JSTL.

Weather Application

Developed an interactive forecast application which utilized Dark Sky and Mapbox APIs together with HTML, CSS, JavaScript, jQuery, and Bootstrap to display a three-day weather forecast. Allows users to drag and drop a map pin or enter their desired location into a search box with built-in geocoding and reverse geocoding.
